

devour design

design

by mandy mcclausky

why

In a time where people are discovering everything for themselves to save money or just to try new things, the need may seem almost completely unnecessary. However, very few who begin follow-through, and even fewer who keep going are any good. The need for a good designer is high, but companies aren't willing to pay the cost. Yet the indifference lies in the fact that those who take the smaller jobs will eventually make it. Those who charge too much to begin with will just suffer the consequences.

end.